WIND-TOSSED BEACH UMBRELLA KILLS VIRGINIA WOMAN

A wind-driven beach umbrella struck and killed a 55-year-old woman in Virginia Beach, Virginia, local police said. The woman, Lottie Michelle Belk, of Chester, Virginia, was hit when a strong gust of wind tossed the anchored umbrella across the sand on Wednesday afternoon, Virginia Beach police said in a statement. Belk was struck in the torso and went into cardiac arrest. Emergency personnel transported her to a hospital, where she died, the state-ment said. "There is no evidence of foul play," police said. Virginia Beach is about 110 miles south of Washington, D.C.

CALIFORNIA AG SLAMS SENTENCE IN STANFORD SEX ASSAULT CASE

California Attorney General Kamala Harris, the leading U.S. Senate candidate from the state, has joined the outpouring of criticism against a six-month jail sentence given to a former Stanford University swimmer convicted of sexually assaulting an unconscious woman. Harris, speaking to reporters in the San Francisco Bay area on Wednesday, said she was concerned that the "victim's voice was not heard" at the trial. "It was not respected, and she was not given dignity in the process," said Harris, a Democrat, according to video from a local television station. With the comments, Harris has become the most high-profile elected official in California to question the sentence for former Stanford student Brock Turner, 20, last week by a Santa Clara Superior Court judge. Prosecutors had asked for a six-year prison term. REUTERS

SOURCE: VERIZON'S BID FOR YAHOO'S WEB ASSETS TOPPED BY OTHERS

Verizon Communications did not submit the highest offer this week in the second round of bidding for Yahoo Inc.'s core internet assets, according to a person familiar with the matter. No committed financing was required for second-round bids, and Yahoo will put together in the coming days a new shortlist of bidders from which it will solicit binding offers, the person added. Yahoo and Verizon offered no immediate comment. Earlier on Thursday, CNBC reported, citing sources, that Verizon's bid of more than $3.5 billion was topped by multiple offers at or above $5 billion. It did not name the parties that made those offers. REUTERS

NY begins painting 'activity' zones to regulate Times Square

NYPD enforcement of the new rules and zones will begin June 21.

ANGY ALTAMIRANO
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

Costumed superheroes, topless women wearing only paint, street performers and Disney characters are being put in their place in Times Square.

City Department of Transportation crews on Thursday taped off areas of pedestrian plazas and painted sidewalks to mark eight zones where commercial activity, such as soliciting money to have your picture taken with Spider-Man, will be permitted after June 21.

"The conversion of Times Square into a pedestrian plaza has made it a truly amazing, special place — but it has needed ground rules," said Manhattan Borough President Gale A. Brewer. "Thanks to the hard work of the Times Square Alliance; the administration; and my colleagues, Councilmembers Dan Garodnick and Corey Johnson, now it will have them."

Attraction and revulsion

For some, posing with the topless women or having their child meet a Disney character is part of the attraction of visiting Times Square. But others have complained that public nudity isn't appropriate for young children to see, and some of the superheroes and other costumed performers haven't always stayed in character.

Last month, a man known as "the hug guy" was arrested for allegedly punching a tourist after jumping into her picture then demanding she pay him, CBS2 New York reported.

A Spider-Man allegedly attacked a police officer, a "Sesame Street"

Designated activity zone TWITTER; MAP BY DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

Elmo was arrested for allegedly harassing people and yelling anti-Semitic slurs and a "Toy Story" Woody was accused of groping women.

"These people are horrible," Upper West Side resident Daniella Lattes told CBS2. "They attack people, they fight with each other."

Local organizations and elected officials pushed for regulating solicitors and performers after an increase in reports of characters fighting, harassing, yelling and stealing from people.

According to a survey by the Times Square Alliance, 61 percent of people working in Times Square reported experiencing a negative encounter with a costumed character or other commercial solicitors. Of those, 51 percent said they felt unsafe.

Regulations

In April, Mayor Bill de Blasio signed a bill that gave the DOT control over all 53 pedestrian plazas across the city, allowing the agency to set rules for the spaces, including restricting where the solicitors could operate.

Starting Wednesday night and going through the end of the week, the DOT is installing activity and flow zones in Times Square from Broadway to 7th Avenue between 42nd and 47th streets. The zones will be delineated with painted tape but also feature signs identifying each area.

The Designated Activity Zones — targeted for commercial activities including the costumed and painted solicitors — are painted teal and measure 8 feet by 50 feet.

Under the new law, these spaces are meant for any sort of entertainment, performances, vending or posing or taking photos for any form of compensation, donation or tip.

Pedestrian Flow Zones will be solely for people looking to get through the area and create a "safe and continuous movement of pedestrian traffic."

Going forward

Starting on Monday, the DOT will have street ambassadors, together with police officers, conducting education and outreach in both English and Spanish. They will distribute fliers with maps indicating the zones and the rules.

The NYPD will begin enforcement of the new rules starting June 21 and the DOT will monitor implementation and also determine if any adjustments need to be made.

Before the City Council voted to approve the bill giving the DOT control over the public spaces, costumed characters called the regulation an "apartheid" against the solicitors and accused the city of taking away their jobs.

According to PIX11 New York, some of the street performers are planning to file a lawsuit against the city.

Campaign asks for residents' ideas for healthier communities

In Our Backyards will help winners plan, crowdfund and carry out their projects using $100,000 in matching grants.

One nonprofit is asking residents in neighborhoods across New York City and New York state to open their minds and come up with ideas that will bring change right to their backyards.

In partnership with the New York State Health Foundation, the nonprofit In Our Backyards — also known as ioby — has launched a neighborhood challenge looking for project ideas aimed at creating healthier, safer and greener communities.

The challenge — which provides $100,000 in matching grants — is open to residents in six neighborhoods in New York City — including Brownsville, Claremont, East Harlem, Hunts Point, the Lower East Side and Morrisania — and three areas in upstate New York.

According to Lourdes

A bilingual family bike-safety presentation and group ride to encourage safe cycling in Carpinteria, California. IOBY

Rodriguez, program officer for the NYS Health Foundation, the neighborhoods were selected for this challenge because they showed poor health outcomes and received low health rankings in the state. The areas are also ones that already have a large community involvement, which can be used to implement programs or spread awareness.

"From the beginning we place a lot of value in resident-driven change because to assume neighborhoods need to be rescued from themselves is really a wrong assumption," Rodriguez said. "The piece to build a better community comes from within itself."

Through the Healthy Neighborhoods Challenge, residents in the neighborhoods are asked to submit an application — by Aug. 1 — for their ideas that are aimed at improving public health outcomes.

There is not limit to what an idea can be and can include improved access to healthy affordable foods; promote walking, biking or other forms of exercise; creative nutrition classes and creating community gardens.

According to Katie Lohr, director of communications and creative strategy for ioby, the length of the idea is also not an issue and one-day festivals or fairs are also encouraged.

"The ideas are that they happen quickly and by making a small change that is physical, they can

Northern Manhattan residents perform as part of Hike the Heights, an annual celebration of parks and community health. ELIZABETH LEITZELL spark a large conversation," Lohr said. "We are very open to things that are not permanent but play a catalyzing role in the community."

All applications must offer a positive impact on the public health of residents within the communities selected; be implemented before May 2017; request from $250 to $5,000 in matching funds; include a team or three or more people working on the project; and be resident-led.

Once winners are selected, ioby — which since 2009 has been offering an online platform for individuals across the country to have access to crowdfunding and resources in their communities — will help individuals plan, crowdfund and later carry out their projects.

The group will train individuals on project planning, online fundraising and also guide them through their fundraising process. All funds up to $5,000 will be matched through the partnership with the NYS Health Foundation, all summing up to a total of $100,000.

"We are encouraging people to think creatively on how to make their neighborhood healthier," Lohr said.

Police tackle Citi Bike rider to protect Obama motorcade

An Instagram video captured the moment when several NYPD officers tackled a man unknowingly biking toward a police blockade for President Barack Obama on Wednesday afternoon.

Police attempted to stop 59-year-old Daniel Provencio from getting in the way of the president's motorcade before throwing him to the ground, but according to the New York Post he didn't respond quickly enough to their warnings.

All eyes were on the Manhattan local until Obama's car drove past East 50th Street and stole all the attention. Provencio and his Citi Bike remained on the ground detained by officers while onlookers cheered and waved at the president's car.

NYPD: Attempted rapist follows woman in Queens

The suspect dragged the victim into the backyard of a building where she fought him off.

The man then told the woman he had a gun and that he was going to rape her, police said.

He then dragged the victim into the backyard of a residential building where the woman fought him off and yelled for help. The man then ran away southbound on 121st Street.

Police are looking for a man caught on surveillance video early Wednesday following a woman he later attempted to rape.

On June 8 at about 4:45 a.m. the suspect followed the 51-year-old victim along 121st Street near 23rd Avenue before approaching her from behind, according to authorities.

Authorities describe the suspect as a Hispanic man between 23 and 25 years old, 5 feet 11 inches tall and 180 pounds. He has a tattoo of a cross and Jesus on his right arm, and was last seen wearing a white tank top, dark colored jeans and yellow work boots.

Man steals Bronx taxi driver's cellphone and then his car

Surveillance photos of the suspect NYPD

The NYPD is looking for a man they say robbed a taxi driver of more than just a fare in the Bronx early Wednesday.

On June 8 at about 1:18 a.m. the suspect entered the 53-year-old victim's taxi near Hunts Point and Garrison avenues and posed as a customer, according to police. When the driver took the man to the vicinity of Drake Street and Randall Avenue, the suspect then grabbed the victim's cellphone, cops said. The two men then fought inside the vehicle until they both fell out.

The suspect managed to make his way into the driver's seat and drove away with the taxi, police said. He later abandoned the vehicle in front of 742 Whittier St. and ran away. Police describe the suspect — who was caught on surveillance video — as a Hispanic man with a beard, 5 feet 9 inches tall and between 150 and 170 pounds. He was last seen wearing a blue shirt and blue jeans.

City offers $100 million to buy land for long-awaited Bushwick Inlet Park

The purchase would allow the city to complete the Bushwick Inlet Park project along the East River.

CHRIS CAESAR
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

New York City is offering $100 million to buy land at the site of a former Brooklyn storage facility in an effort to complete the Bushwick Inlet Park project.

The CitiStorage warehouse in Williamsburg, located between North 10th and 12th streets, was the site of a six-alarm fire in 2015.

The parcel would be the last piece of land needed for the city to complete the long-envisioned park, offering some green space for residents along the banks of the East River on the border of Williamsburg and Greenpoint.

Mayor Bill de Blasio posted a letter from his office to the owners of the property on Twitter:

"As part of our long-standing efforts and continued commitment to making Bushwick Inlet Park a reality, I am pleased to offer you $100,000,000 for the purchase of the blocks and lots listed above," the letter from the mayor's office reads. "The City believes this is a fair and reasonable offer based on the properties' current ... zoning."

Planning initiatives for the park date back to the 1980s and would reflect years of work and the combination of other properties acquired by the city, including two others under de Blasio's mayorship.

The offer stands for 60 days, according to the letter.

The casket of Muhammad Ali arrives for an Islamic Funeral Prayer service at the Kentucky Exposition Center on Thursday in Louisville, Kentucky. GETTY IMAGES

Thousands gather for Muslim funeral honoring Muhammad Ali

An estimated 14,000 people, representing many races and creeds, attended the jenazah, or funeral in Arabic.

A Muslim funeral for Muhammad Ali on Thursday drew thousands of admirers to the boxer's hometown of Louisville, Kentucky, where mourners prayed over the body of a man who battled in the ring and sought peace outside it.

Ali, a three-time heavyweight champion known for his showmanship, political activism and devotion to humanitarian causes, died on Friday of septic shock in an Arizona hospital. He was 74.

"The passing of Muhammad Ali has made us all feel a little more alone in the world," said Sherman Jackson, a Muslim scholar at the University of Southern California.

"Something solid, something big, beautiful and life-affirming has left this world," he said of a man who was forced to give up more than three years of boxing at the height of his career for his refusal to serve in the U.S. military during the Vietnam War.

Jackson praised Ali for advancing the cause of black Americans during and after the civil rights movement of the 1960s. Others admired him for making Islam more acceptable and giving U.S. Muslims a hero they could share with the American mainstream. Imam Zaid Shakir, a founder of Muslim liberal arts school Zaytuna College in Berkeley, California, led worshippers in prayers such as "Allahu akbar" ("God is greatest") over Ali's body, which lay in a casket covered with a black and gold cloth.

Ali and his family planned his funeral for 10 years, making sure it would honor his Muslim faith while also adapting to the demands of Western media-driven culture.

He was due to be buried on Friday, after a funeral procession and before one final goodbye when thousands more will gather for an inter-faith service. REUTERS

BRIEF

US pilot examiners get more mental health training after Germanwings crash

Medical examiners who evaluate airline pilots have received more training in detecting mental health problems, U.S. regulators said on Thursday, after reviewing procedures in the wake of last year's deadly Germanwings crash caused by a co-pilot who suffered from severe depression.

The Federal Aviation Administration stopped short of calling for formal psychological tests on pilots. That step was recommended for new pilots in Europe after the March 2015 incident, in which a Germanwings plane crashed into the French Alps, killing all 150 people on board.

The FAA said it will help airlines and unions expand support networks for pilots such as confidential hotlines, and integrate these into airlines' safety management programs.

The decisions, which followed recommendations by a government-industry task force, underscore the challenge of making pilots feel comfortable disclosing health issues, despite risking a required medical leave or an end to their careers.

President Obama formally endorses Clinton for president

President Obama says he's 'fired up' for Hillary Clinton, urges Democrats to unite.

President Barack Obama formally endorsed Hillary Clinton's White House bid on Thursday and called for the Democratic Party to unite behind her after a protracted battle with Bernie Sanders for the party nomination.

Clinton said it "means the world" to her that Obama has her back to beat Trump.

The endorsement increases pressure on Sanders, a senator from Vermont, to concede the race so the party can focus on campaigning against Donald Trump, the Republican presumptive nominee for the Nov. 8 election.

"It is absolutely a joy and an honor that President Obama and I, over the years, have gone from fierce competitors to true friends," Clinton told Reuters in an interview.

Obama defeated Clinton in the 2008 Democratic primary and she went on to serve as secretary of state in his first term.

Obama, who enjoys strong approval ratings after nearly eight years in office, will campaign with Clinton next week in Wisconsin, her campaign said.

"I don't think there's ever been someone so qualified to hold this office," President Obama said of Clinton in a video. "I'm with her. I am fired up, and I cannot wait to get out there and campaign for Hillary," Obama said.

Obama had been expected to support Clinton since she won enough delegates this week to clinch the Democratic nomination and become the first woman to lead a major U.S. party as its presidential nominee.

Sanders, who met with Obama at the White House earlier on Thursday, said afterward he would work with Clinton to defeat Trump.

Sanders said, however, that he would stay in the race to compete in the final Democratic primary vote in Washington, D.C., on June 14.

Sources: Clinton ally Warren weighs potential VP role, sees hurdles

Sen. Elizabeth Warren has considered the idea of serving as Hillary Clinton's running mate but sees obstacles to that choice as she prepares to endorse the presumptive Democratic presidential nominee, several people familiar with Warren's thinking told Reuters.

While her thinking could evolve, Warren has concerns about joining a Clinton ticket, including the question of whether running two women would give the Democrats the best shot at defeating Republican Donald Trump, one source said.

Advisers to Warren, a fiery critic of Wall Street and a popular figure among progressive Democrats, have been in close contact with Clinton's campaign team and the conversations have increased in frequency in recent weeks, the sources said. Warren has signaled to people close to her that she is intrigued by the possibility of being Clinton's No. 2 but has not discussed the role with Clinton, 68, or anyone else from her campaign, the people said.

1, 2, 3 — CLINTON LOSES?

First female presumptive nominee for a major political party! Glass ceiling cracked! Thank you America! For Hillary Clinton, this was a drop-mic-walk-away week. Despite all the haters, the alleged "vast right wing conspiracy," and a talent for making statements she later has to clarify, she has made history. And now the numbers say this is Clinton's race to lose. If she holds onto all the states Barack Obama won in 2012, she wins big. If she can add one or two — like Arizona or Georgia — it's a landslide. And if Donald Trump keeps saying things so nutty even his Republican allies run to hide, the electorate may give her the White House plus a year of free cable with HBO. "Come in here, Bill, Khaleesi is riding toward Winterfell!" So what could go wrong? Plenty.

lawyerly answers all feed the idea that she can't be trusted — which still holds the potential of incinerating her at the polls.

3. The economy ... or terrorism
Or something else. Clinton says she'll continue the legacy of Obama. That's fine as long as enough voters feel good about that. But let the recovery stall, or let gas prices jump, or let terrorists strike and look out ... As much as Democrats should feel good (and Republicans dismayed) about her chances right now, it is important to remember Clinton was the choice of the party elites in 2008 until Barack Obama — a neophyte — outmaneuvered her, ignited the voting public and burned her campaign to the ground. In other words, it was already once her race to lose. And she found a way.

1. Trump gets his groove back
In the Republican primary, the billionaire from New York chewed up challengers like a feral cat. He has a knack for picking damning nicknames, staging surprise attacks, grabbing populist themes and turning his lack of experience into a platinum-plated qualification for office — all of which could be

US appeals court: No constitutional right to concealed guns

Firearm owners have no constitutional right to carry a concealed gun in public, a divided U.S. appeals court in California ruled on Thursday, upholding the right of officials to only grant permits to those facing a specific danger.

The decision by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, a victory for gun control advocates which sets a legal precedent in western states, was seen as unlikely to be reviewed by the U.S. Supreme Court in the near future.

The San Francisco-based court, in a 7-4 decision, found California's San Diego and Yolo counties did not violate the Second Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, which protects the right to bear arms, when they denied some applicants a concealed firearm license.

"We hold that the Second Amendment does not protect, in any degree, the carrying of concealed firearms by members of the general public," Judge William Fletcher wrote in a 52-page opinion.

Sheriffs in the two California counties had limited their permits to applicants showing "good cause" to be armed, such as documented threats or working in a wide range of risky occupations.

The ruling places the 9th

Circuit Court in line with other U.S. appellate courts that have upheld the right of officials in the states of New York, Maryland and New Jersey to deny concealed carry applications in certain cases.

The U.S. Supreme Court in 2013, in the middle of a raging national debate on guns, declined to weigh in on whether firearm owners have a constitutional right to carry a

Pope Francis to visit Auschwitz during trip to Poland in July

Pope Francis GETTY IMAGES

Pope Francis will visit the Nazi death camp at Auschwitz-Birkenau during a visit to Poland on July 29, the Vatican said on Thursday.

Both of Francis's immediate predecessors, Pope Benedict, a German, and Pope John Paul, a Pole, also visited the site during their pontificates.

Nazi German occupying forces established the Auschwitz-Birkenau Nazi camp during World War II in the southern Polish town of Oswiecim, around 43 miles from Poland's second city, Krakow.

The visit will take place during Francis's pre-planned trip to Krakow for an international gathering of Catholic youth. Poland remains a staunchly Roman Catholic country.

Between 1940 and 1945, Auschwitz developed into a vast complex of barracks, workshops, gas chambers and crematoria, where about 1.5 million people, most of them Jews, died.

Soviet Red Army troops liberated the camp on Jan. 27, 1945.

During a visit to Rome's synagogue in January, Francis appealed to Catholics to reject anti-Semitism and said the Holocaust, in which some six million Jews were killed, should remind everyone that human rights should be defended with "maximum vigilance."

A month earlier, the Vatican issued a major document saying Catholics should not try to convert Jews. REUTERS

BRIEF

After deadly Tel Aviv attack, Israel suspends Palestinian permits

The Israeli military on Thursday revoked permits for 83,000 Palestinians to visit Israel and said it would send hundreds more troops to the occupied West Bank after a Palestinian gun attack that killed four Israelis in Tel Aviv.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the assault by two gunmen on Wednesday in a trendy shopping and dining market near Israel's Defence Ministry, but Hamas and other Palestinian militant groups were quick to praise it.

The assailants came from near Hebron, in the Israeli-occupied West Bank. They dressed in suits and ties and posed as customers at a restaurant, ordering a drink and a chocolate brownie before pulling out automatic weapons and opening fire, sending diners fleeing in panic.

Two women and two men were killed and six others were wounded. The attack followed a lull in recent weeks after what had been near-daily stabbings and shootings on Israeli streets. It was the deadliest single incident since an attack on a Jerusalem synagogue in November 2014 that killed five.

Mask: Photographs by Frank Gimpaya

Inspired by post-Impressionist Georges Seurat's pointillist masterpiece "The Veil," New Jersey-based photographer Gimpaya has created a series of black-and-white portraits of women wearing a plastic mask bought at a Halloween store. The photos — which question the notion of identity, assumptions of beauty and "the emotional projection from a half-hidden face" — will be on view at the Bronx Museum as part of a partnership with En Foco, a nonprofit that supports photographers of color and diverse cultural backgrounds. July 13-Sept. 25, The Bronx Museum, 1040 Grand Concourse

summer arts guide

Summer of the snapshot

This season's must-see museum and gallery shows pay homage to the art of photography.

RAQUEL LANERI
@RaquelLaneri
letters@metro.us

Shutterbugs, rejoice. In addition to a newly revamped International Center of Photography (see page 18), New York City has a plethora of exhibitions devoted to the art of the photo opening this summer. From celebrity snaps to arty portraits to documentary studies, here are some of the picture shows we're looking forward to seeing.

Diane Arbus: In the Beginning

The Met's new outpost for modern art salutes one of the greatest, weirdest and most tragic artists of the 20th century. "In the Beginning" features more than 100 photographs by Diane Arbus, tracing how she went from art-directing photo shoots with her husband for glossies like Vogue and Seventeen to creating provocative, idiosyncratic images of New York City's eccentrics, circus performers, children, female impersonators and pedestrians. Many of these early works are being exhibited for the first time. July 12-Nov. 27, The Met Breuer, 945 Madison Ave.

Nan Goldin: The Ballad of Sexual Dependency

Nan Goldin made her name in the 1970s and '80s with her unflinchingly brutal snapshots chronicling the artist's often volatile life in New York City. Some 700 of these no-holds-barred images make up her magnum opus, "The Ballad of Sexual Dependency," a kind of slideshow (but much more than that) featuring images of sex, drugs, violence and rock 'n' roll, including Goldin's now-iconic self-portrait of her battered-and-bruised face after being domestically abused. The Museum of Modern Art will show "The Ballad" in its original 35 mm presentation, featuring a soundtrack curated by the artist's friends that ranges from opera singer Maria Callas to the Velvet Underground. June 11-Feb. 12, 2017, MoMA, 11 W. 53rd St.

"C.Z. and Max on the Beach"
ROBERT GERHARDT

"Tesca, Cartagena, Columbia"

Danny Lyon: Message to the Future

The Whitney will host the first photo show in its new Meatpacking District home this summer: a survey of documentary-style street photographer Danny Lyon. One of the genre's leading figures of the New Journalism movement of the '60s and '70s, the Brooklyn-born Lyon finally gets his due, with 175 photos and related films and ephemera spanning from the '60s to today. The show will look at the artist's socially and politically motivated shots of outsiders and those living on the fringes of American society, from bikers and rebels to prisoners and outlaws to the poor and downtrodden. June 17-Sept. 25, Whitney Museum of American Art, 99 Gansevoort St.

"Marilyn Monroe, Tobay Beach, Long Island" STEVEN KASHER GALLERY

Marilyn Monroe and American Thoroughbred

Chelsea's Steven Kasher Gallery has two photo shows worth checking out this summer. "Andre de Dienes: Marilyn and California Nudes" mainly chronicles the Romanian photographer's long professional and artistic relationship with Marilyn Monroe, whom he first captured on film before she found fame, when she was an innocent

California girl named Norma Jean Baker. The exhibition will also include De Dienes' experimental nudes shot in California's otherworldly desert landscape. Meanwhile, "Neil Latham: American Thoroughbred" will feature more than 25 large-scale photographs of America's greatest racehorses, including American Pharoah, winner of the Triple Crown. June 9-July 29, Steven Kasher Gallery, 515 W. 26th St.

Ready for its close-up

After a year-and-a-half away from the spotlight, the International Center of Photography debuts its new downtown digs.

RAQUEL LANERI
@Raquellaneri
letters@metro.us

The International Center of Photography had almost everything: an esteemed pedigree (its founder, photojournalist Cornell Capa, was brothers with the legendary war photog Robert Capa), a permanent collection of more than 200,000 images from the likes of gritty tabloid shutterbug Weegee to art-world superstar Cindy Sherman, and some of the best, most ambitious exhibitions New York City had to offer, including surveys on greats like Richard Avedon and deep-dives into the political power of photography in documenting South Africa during apartheid or America in the Civil Rights era.

But it was missing one thing: a lot of visitors.

"That was one of the drawbacks of the midtown space," says ICP curator-in-residence Charlotte Cotton, about the museum's former 42nd Street digs. "The area wasn't associated with going to look at art and think about culture."

She's hoping that's about to change. On June 23 — a year and a half after closing its Bryant Park space — ICP will open its new home at 250 Bowery downtown with the exhibition "Private, Public, Secret" (though January 2017), featuring works by historic and contemporary artists examining the notion of privacy in an increasingly image-centric world, from Andy Warhol to Cindy Sherman to even Kim Kardashian (yes, she has a #selfie here).

It's an unabashedly modern show, which is fitting given its new neighbors include the New Museum across the street, as well as the 130 or so galleries that have popped up in the Lower East Side, a stone's throw away.

"When we lost our [midtown] lease, we wanted to find a space in an amazing cultural corridor of New York," explains Cotton, saying that the museum's new proximity to the burgeoning Lower East Side art scene will likely draw more foot traffic. "We wanted to join a vibrant creative community."

The new steel-and-glass building does look more like a community center than an arts institution: It's not ostentatiously weird, like the New Museum, or particularly sleek, like the revamped Whitney, and it certainly doesn't have the stuffiness of more traditional mans-turned-museums like the Cooper Hewitt.

One-third of the main floor is devoted to free programming — including lectures, workshops and discussions — before entering the $10-$14 galleries, which extend to the lower level. The public space also features a cafe, a bookstore curated by Pittsburgh-based Spaces Corners, a real-time "surveillance clock" by graphic designer David Reinfurt (to go with the "privacy" theme), and a wall for a rotating cast of temporary installations.

"It feels like there's very little barrier to coming in and participating in the space," says Cotton. "And that's what's at the heart of photography: Anyone can do it and participate in it. That's so important."

How to make art happen

Successful women — does Naomi Campbell ring a bell? — will share their stories at The Other Festival.

LINDA LABAN
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

A woman might well be blazing a trail to the White House right now, but do women really have equal opportunity in the arts?

According to Dee Poku, founder of the influential women's leadership program WIE Network, the answer is a resolute no, which is why she's bringing some woman-to-woman wisdom on how to turn creativity from a hobby into a career at the first-ever The Other Festival.

"I've been hosting similar events for the past few years for WIE and seeing self-starters in all areas flocking, looking for support," she says. "That was the genesis for The Other Festival. It will bring female makers into one room where they get advice and inspiration from women in a similar position."

And she's gotten some big names to share their secrets to success: actress Rosario Dawson; Baked by Melissa founder Melissa Ben-Ishay; Stephanie Mark, aka The Coveteur; and model Naomi Campbell, among others. There will also be performances and talks from artists Justine Skye, Natalia Clavier (Thievery Corporation), Brooke Candy, Yuna and Chelsea Layland.

Whether you're a musician or painter, you are heading up a business — and businesswomen need to be just as creative outside of the studio, too. The Other Festival will mark the first in what the U.K.-born, New York-based Poku hopes will be an annual event providing a platform for women in worlds of music, fashion, film, art, food, design and technology to share experiences on overcoming challenges.

"I'm a big believer in creating your network to support your goals," says Poku, speaking from Manhattan's Spring Studios, where the event will be held. "Hearing other women's process and how they overcome difficulties can be very empowering."

"One thing we stress is that the speakers don't speak in broad platitudes — we need specifics and details about things like raising money for a business, or turning creativity into a livelihood."

Poku says she herself finds inspiration from all-female events: "The atmosphere is incredible. It's like being with 50 girlfriends, only there are 500 like-minded women. Being all women totally changes the dynamic."

Still, in an ideal world she would be doing something else rather than organizing all-female networking events.

"I wish we didn't need these things, truly I do. But it's born out by statistics," Poku says of gender-based inequality. "I'd like to go out of business and not have these events. That would mean the culture has changed and women have equal opportunity."

Shakespeare in the Park

It's just not summer until the Public Theater's free outdoor theater series is in full swing at the Delacorte in Central Park. Phyllida Lloyd's "The Taming of the Shrew" is running through June 24 and features an all-female cast. Later this season, Tony Award-winning director and Shakespeare in the Park stalwart Daniel Sullivan returns with "Troilus and Cressida," a Trojan War play that's among the most rarely staged plays by the Bard. "Shrew" through June 26, "Troilus" runs July 19-Aug. 14

We've rounded up five of the hottest shows coming to stages this summer. T. MICHELLE MURPHY

The Tony Awards take place mid-June, with many new shows rushed to stages during spring to make the eligibility deadline. But summer's not exactly a lull on the theater calendar, with plenty of exciting shows taking place both on Broadway and off — which is great when the weather makes it impossible to be anywhere else other than an air-conditioned matinee. We've got your top options opening this season.

'Cats'

Yes, they're finally bringing Andrew Lloyd Webber's trippy show about singing felines back to Broadway. Despite the fact that this mystifying masterpiece is often referenced as a punchline, it does hold a significant place in the annals of Broadway. Its return has not been without its share of drama, either. Rumors swirled about which leading lady would land the coveted role of Grizabella, and the part ultimately went to pop artist Leona Lewis (Season 4 winner of the U.K.'s "X Factor"). It will be helmed by its original 1982 director Trevor Nunn, with choreography by Andy Blankenbuehler ("Hamilton"). Opens Aug. 2

'Privacy'

After three previous NYC stage stints, Daniel Radcliffe returns this summer with a quiet off-Broadway show at the Public Theater, which has been attracting bigger and bigger names ever since kicking off a little show called "Hamilton." "Privacy" is a new play by James Graham ("Finding Neverland") that follows a shy young man who tries to get his bearings in the big city through social media. But making yourself available to the world isn't always good, as he quickly learns. Opens July 18

'Takarazuka: Chicago'

A cherished art form unto itself in Japan, Takarazuka famously reenacts works ranging from books to film to manga — all ending in an over-the-top spectacle of glitter, feathers and kick lines reminiscent of Vegas showgirls or the Ziegfeld Follies. This July, it comes to the U.S. for the first time at Lincoln Center with a rendition of "Chicago," with an all-female cast and completely in Japanese. July 20-24

'Oslo'

This new play is for history buffs, conspiracy theorists and anyone who's eager to be reminded that the world is weirder than we often realize. In 1993, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Palestinian Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat shook hands at the White House — how it happened wasn't known until diplomats told the story to playwright J.T. Rogers. Opens July 11

THE FUN STARTS HERE

Thoughts on the 70th Tonys

Here's what everyone will be talking about on Broadway's biggest night.

T. MICHELLE MURPHY
@TMichelleMurphy
tmichelle.murphy@metro.us

This Sunday, the 70th Tony Awards will be held at the Beacon Theatre — but don't call it the #HamilTonys just yet. While "Hamilton" is certainly the buzzword on everyone's lips, with a record-breaking 16 nominations, here's a closer look at the important themes that will come into play throughout the night.

Originality rules

It's been an exciting season for new shows. "Hamilton," yes, but also "The Humans," a mood play about a dysfunctional family, widely considered a shoo-in for Best Play, the speculative future play "King George III" and "Bright Star," among others. We're eager to see which new shows will be rewarded against the similarly strong tide of revivals and adaptations.

New sounds

One exciting trend has been new musical genres breaking onto Broadway stages. Pop artists like Cyndi Lauper ("Kinky Boots") paved the way for Sara Bareilles ("Waitress") and Edie Brickell ("Bright Star," with Steve Martin) to make their mark outside of the jukebox musical model.

A youthful season

"Hamilton" has drawn younger audiences to Broadway. But will they see anything else? When it comes to playwrights, all four 2016 Best Play nominees were written by talents under 40. And it's just been announced that "Dear Evan Hansen" — a show about an awkward teen written by Benj Pasek, 30, and Justin Paul, 31 — will hit Broadway in 2017. Will the Tonys acknowledge them?

Is diversity a trend?

Will Sunday's awards acknowledge shows about people of color? This strong season included "Eclipsed" (about the Second Liberian Civil War) and "Shuffle Along" (about the Great White Way's first nonwhite hit). Yet George Takei's "Allegiance," a semi-autobiographical show about the actor's childhood in a Japanese internment camp, received no nods. So we'll have to see where the awards fall.

Looking ahead

It's going to be telling how much the Tonys address the future of Broadway — whether it's previewing new shows or discussing how the industry is adapting to new audiences. This broadcast will reveal whether the Broadway community will write off "Hamilton" as a fluke, or use it to justify taking new risks.

Would you like to study the Bible – seriously?

"Be diligent to present yourself approved to God, a worker who does not need to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

2 Timothy 2:15

Lots of people discuss the Bible, but not as many study it carefully and comprehensively. If you are willing to invest some time and effort (not money) we will help. Group studies, Conference call classes and Meet-up studies are forming this month.

Hot Chip's Alexis Taylor looks intently inward for his new solo album. REDFERNS

Alexis Taylor's emotional enthusiasm

The Hot Chip frontman gets vulnerable on his new solo release.

CANDACE MCDUFFIE
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

Hot Chip frontman Alexis Taylor is far more than a genre-melting electronic lothario. On his second solo effort, "Piano," the British musician takes a break from wreaking dance floor havoc to deliver an LP that features a scaled-down Taylor singing over the heart-swelling instrumentals. The result is an album that is full of clear-eyed, cathartic intensity that revels in unhinged musicality.

"I'm not really sure whether or not I could have that impact on — I just knew that [making the album] was emotional for me," Taylor explains. "It's really tricky subject matter and everyone will have a different response to it. Some people don't feel anything at all; others feel a lot. But I want 'Piano' to have a deep impact."

From the blistering opener "I'm Ready" to the raw emotion of "In The Light of The Room," "Piano," out June 10 from Moshi Moshi, is Taylor's most vulnerable project to date. However, he doesn't seem too concerned with the feedback he'll receive from loyal Hot Chip listeners.

"I don't feel like I'm expecting a different response from fans because 'Piano' is barer and stripped back. I'm nervous for any record I make, not more so with this one," Taylor explains. "There's not more of me on display — I just made a record that's more revealing of the self. That's what I tend to do and 'Piano' is a natural progression of where I've been."

Although Taylor jumped into the making of "Piano" with equal amounts of enthusiasm that he has for all of his records with Hot Chip, he acknowledges the difference in creative output. "We've been a collaboration for years, so the emotional input into the music is going to be different since it's a shared project. We're a dance music synth-based pop group, [and] I am still that person even though Hot Chip isn't just me," Taylor reveals.

"I also don't get much feedback from the band on my solo material because it's hard to share this thing you've chosen to do without them in a way. I wasn't sure if they wanted to hear it."

Regardless of Taylor's artistic inclinations, he remains adamant about wanting to produce music that's powerful. "I don't always want to do something radically different in sound. With 'Piano,' I wanted purer sounds and, more importantly, sonic clarity."

Daniel Radcliffe nerds out

The actor talks about playing a villain in "Now You See Me 2" and his strange "Swiss Army Man."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Daniel Radcliffe can be excitable. The actor has spent his post-"Harry Potter" life trying out new things, doing projects that get him worked up, from the rom-com "What If" to the oddball horror film "Horns." Radcliffe has two films out soon. One is "Now You See Me 2," the sequel to the surprise 2013 hit about mystical magicians. (He plays the main villain: a rich kid — the son of Michael Caine's character, as it were — who wants to use our heroic foursome for grand larceny.) But he can't help talking about "Swiss Army Man," too, the Sundance puzzler, hitting theaters July 1, in which he plays a semi-sentient corpse that farts a lot.

"Swiss Army Man" has a strong buzz as a movie that quite deep and moving considering it's about a farting corpse.

What I love about it is it manages to be both incredibly beautiful and intelligent and reflective while at the same time gross and stupid and puerile. It bounces back and forth between those two happily. Anytime the movie starts getting too sincere or earnest, just wait two seconds and the directors will find a way to undercut that. I think it's an astonishing achievement. It's honestly one of the things — if not the thing — I'm proudest of that I've done since "Potter." I may never be in something quite like that ever again. I don't imagine I will be.

I get the sense that, with every project you do, there has to be something, some idea, that really grabs you. What was it with "Now You See Me 2"? The thing I was honestly most nerding out about was working with Michael Caine. That's a life goal crossed off my list. He was everything I hope to be when I'm that age.

Most actors are really jaded. It's a status thing that once you get to a certain level in the industry you don't care or are above caring about the films you work on. Whereas he's still having a great time, telling stories, chatting away, loving it. To me, it shows you don't have to be jaded. You can do 100 movies and be at the top of your industry for 60 years and still be having a great time.

You probably got great stories, too. His memoir is pretty slender, and you imagine he's keeping most of the juicy stuff out of the public eye. There are definitely some. I'm not going to tell tales out of school. But they were great.

Going Slytherin

What about your character? This is your first real villain role. But he's equally evil and pathetic. What I thought was interesting was his relationship to magic. It's the difference between the person who is happy to suspend his disbelief and somebody who wants to work rigorously to figure out how the trick is done. My character, being someone who can't do magic, is made to feel stupid by it. His whole identity is being the smartest guy in the room. As soon as someone makes him feel inadequate he has to control or dominate it. That's where his maniacal behavior comes from — as well as his deep loneliness and father issues.

And it must be a trip to play a villain. Absolutely. There was something fun about not having to be mindful that the audience should like you or root for you. I could be as petulant and bratty as I wanted. It does feel like a rite of passage in terms of being a British guy playing a bad guy in an American movie. I was very happy to fulfill that.

Ecuador the heavy favorite over Haiti in Copa America tourney

The Copa America soccer tournament continues this Sunday at MetLife Stadium.

RICH SLATE
@RichSlate
sports@metro.us

One thing is pretty much certain on Sunday night in Group B: Haiti's (0-0-2) 2016 Copa America journey will be done after they meet Ecuador (0-2-0) at MetLife Stadium (6:30 p.m., Fox Sports 1) in East Rutherford, New Jersey. Haiti lost 1-0 to Peru in its opener last Saturday at CenturyLink Field in Seattle, but it wasn't a bad showing. Their fate was sealed though with Wednesday's humbling 7-1 loss to Brazil (1-1-0) at Camping World Stadium in Orlando. The Haitians will still have something to play for (beyond national pride) as Ecuador needs a win in order to advance to the quarterfinals.

Ecuador has proven to be one of the hardest teams to figure out in this competition since they opened with an impressive 0-0 tie with Brazil last Saturday at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, California. They followed that up with a puzzling 2-2 draw with Peru on Wednesday. Not every point is the same since a tie with Brazil is a fine result any day of the week, but a draw with Peru is disappointing to a country like Ecuador.

Further complicating matters is the fact that Brazil meets Peru later that night (8:30, Fox Sports 1) at Gillette Stadium. So even if Ecuador takes care of their own business and beats Haiti as they are expected to, they would still need some help from Brazil (a Peru upset would be fatal to Ecuador). Things could always be much bleaker for Ecuador since they trailed 2-0 to Peru just 13 minutes into their match. Striker Enner Valencia cut it to 2-1 in the 39th minute (with their first goal of the tournament) and striker Miller Bolaños tied it up three minutes into the second half. Ecuadorian defender Gabriel Achilier received his second yellow card in the 93rd minute but it was too late to make much of a difference against Peru.

When these groups were announced, most predicted Brazil to win Group B — with Ecuador coming in second-place. Ecuador comes from the powerful CONMEBOL federation (South America), was in the 2014 World Cup and is currently ranked No. 13 in the latest FIFA rankings. On the other side, Haiti is happy to gain this experience against such quality teams. The progress that they showed in the narrow loss to Peru was overshadowed by the beating inflicted by Brazil. They have a chance to hold their heads up high if they can tie or pull off a shocking win over Ecuador.

Mets take on Brewers, Yankees host Tigers

This weekend the Mets travel to Milwaukee to face the Brewers while the Yankees host the Detroit Tigers.

Friday's game between the Mets and Brewers will see the resurgent Matt Harvey (4-8, 4.95 ERA) taking the hill against Junior Guerra (3-1, 3.61 ERA). Harvey has rebounded from a poor start to the season by allowing just one earned run in his last 14 IP. This will be his first career start against Milwaukee.

Logan Verrett (3-3, 3.41 ERA) makes a spot start on Saturday to prevent Steven Matz or Jacob deGrom from pitching on short rest (both were used in Tuesday's doubleheader against Pittsburgh). Verrett was roughed up in his last start on May 14 but it came at Coors Field; before that Verrett turned in back-to-back quality starts on April 13 and 19 (no runs allowed in 12 IP).

The Mets' batters have an opportunity for a much-needed outburst against Willy Peralta (3-7, 6.79 ERA), who takes the hill against them on Saturday. He has the worst ERA and WHIP (1.93) among qualified MLB starters. Curtis Granderson has been particularly successful in the past against Peralta (5-for-11 with two home runs).

Yankees - Tigers

The Yankees will try to tame the Tigers in a three-game set this weekend. CC Sabathia (3-4, 2.58

Looking up

Both the Mets and Yankees are looking up in the standings these days. The Mets (32-26) trailed the Nationals by 3.5 games as of Thursday and the Yankees were looking up at three teams in the AL East. The Yanks trailed first-place Baltimore by 6.5 games as of Thursday.

ERA) starts on Friday, and he had a control issue in his last start, surrendering six walks in just five frames against the Orioles on June 5. He'll have to pay careful attention to Miguel Cabrera, who's a .294 hitter against him (34 ABs) with two homers and 12 RBIs.

Mike Pelfrey (1-5, 4.76 ERA) looks for his second straight win on the mound, but he'll have to rebound off a poor start against the Bombers on April 9 in which he allowed six runs on seven hits in less than four innings. Pelfrey has the fewest strikeouts among qualified starters, which should only aid a Yankees' roster that has the fourth-fewest strikeouts in baseball.

Masahiro Tanaka (3-1, 2.76 ERA) and Justin Verlander (5-5, 3.97 ERA) will get a chance to face off on Saturday night after having their Sunday Night Baseball matchup rained out on April 10. Tanaka has allowed just four earned runs in his last four starts, but is 0-1 with a 4.76 ERA against Detroit in two career outings. ROBERT CRISCOLA

Who to bet on at Belmont Stakes

The best bets to win in New York.

ROBERT CRISCOLA
@ItsGood2BeKing
sports@metro.us

There may not be a Triple Crown on the line this year, but the Belmont Stakes (6 p.m., NBC) still promises to be a very exciting race. It drew a competitive field of 13, but here are the three horses you should be watching for when the field is sent on its way Saturday.

Exaggerator

(Post Position: 11, Odds: 9-5)

Exaggerator won't offer generous odds having just won the Preakness Stakes three weeks ago, especially after the defection of Kentucky Derby winner Nyquist due to sickness, but he will be tough to beat Saturday. Exaggerator's credentials are overwhelming, as he's won four graded stakes in his career (two this year), and figures to handle the testing mile-and-a-half distance of the Belmont Stakes based on pedigree (he's by Curlin, who ran second in this race in 2007 en route to becoming the richest horse of all time upon retirement). He'll also take to any track condition. Kent Desormeaux will ride Exaggerator again, but there was some speculation that he wouldn't be able to after checking into alcohol rehab sometime after the Preakness.

Stradivari can more than handle himself on a fast track. GETTY IMAGES

Desormeaux has one Belmont Stakes win to his credit; it came aboard Summer Bird in 2009. The one knock against Exaggerator might be his post, but he should have enough time to drop back and cross over toward the rail before the first turn of the mammoth Belmont Park oval.

Stradivari

(Post Position: 5, Odds: 5-1)

Stradivari was a wild card going into the Preakness Stakes; he had never run in a stakes race before, but was coming off two straight romps against lesser competition. He was a little hard to control early and suffered a wide trip partially due to his outside post, but his effort was commendable; he was fourth beaten four lengths. That was on a sloppy track; he's already proved he can handle a fast one, which is what he's likely to catch Saturday. Todd Pletcher and John Velazquez, the trainer/jockey combo behind Stradivari, teamed up for a win in the Belmont Stakes in 2007 with the filly Rags To Riches.

Governor Malibu

(Post Position: 1, Odds: 12-1)

Governor Malibu will have to improve a bit from a speed figure standpoint, but this 12-1 shot has a lot going for him in this race. He was a fast-closing second in last month's mile-and-an-eighth Peter Pan Stakes, the traditional prep at Belmont for the crown jewel of their spring/summer meet. His running style suggests he'll improve with added distance, as does his pedigree. He's by Malibu Moon, a noted distance influence, whose sire was 1992 Belmont Stakes winner A.P. Indy. Governor Malibu will be represented by the same connections that won the 2014 Belmont Stakes with Tonalist; jockey Joel Rosario and trainer Christophe Clement.

Aries The people you encounter will provide you with information that will help you use your money more efficiently. Romance will encourage personal improvements.

Taurus Emotional matters will surface if you neglect your personal responsibilities or someone who depends on you. Focus on the people who matter, and avoid an unnecessary argument.

Gemini Deal with emotional issues before they explode. Exert yourself physically to ease stress. Self-improvement will bring you more satisfaction than trying to change someone else.

Cancer You can tackle anything you put your mind to. Home improvements will make you happy and please the ones you love. An interesting job offer should be considered.

Leo Getting away someplace you have never been before will inspire you to take on a new challenge. Wrap up any lingering matters before you start something new.

Virgo Don't let criticism spoil a professional or personal relationship. Do everything you can to improve your health and well-being. Research and knowledge will help avert a costly mistake.

Yesterday's answers

Can't wait until tomorrow to check your answers? Visit metro.us

Libra Don't let anyone take care of your investments and assets. Set up a fitness regimen that will keep you looking your very best. Romance will stabilize your life.

Scorpio A position will open up that will interest you. Cold calls will help you close deals and develop valuable contacts. Trust in your intuition and abilities.

Sagittarius Don't make the same mistake twice. If someone has let you down in the past, move on to someone you know you can count on. Keep emotional matters in check.

Capricorn Look over any pending contracts, settlements or money matters. A strategic move that will improve your current position or reputation looks possible.

Aquarius Emotional problems will leave you feeling stressed. Make plans to do something enjoyable with a loved one. Now is not the time to start a war. Enhance your appearance.

Pisces Attend an event that will educate you about a future pursuit. A problem with an older or younger family member is best dealt with quickly. Get the facts. EUGENIA LAST
